

Working on heritage

THE art and craft of creating heritage designs while the cement or plaster dries on the facade or inside of houses is all in a days work for J&J

Traditional Rendering and Plastering.

For the past nine years the company has restored and designed intricate and contemporary facades and interior work.

J&J Traditional Rendering and Plastering manager Joe Stephens said creating the designs while the cement or plaster dried made it strong and durable.

"This also makes it ideal to match existing designs," he said.

"Heritage work is our specialty and we are more than capable of undertaking authentic heritage rendering and plastering.

"Crack repairing is another aspect of our services so we can add longevity to our customers' beautiful homes.

"We can improve the frontage by either a full restoration or by adding to the current facade as well as undertake all indoor work that may seem daunting to the owner.

"We can match heritage interiors to new extensions or create the old world look to new homes."

Some of the many projects tackled by J&J Traditional Rendering and Plastering include stairs, walls, fences, archways and decorative moulds around windows and doorways.
